

(reményeim szerint az egész projekt ebben, vagy hasonló fontban lesz)

Főoldal

introtext:

Welcome to the internet's newest home for everything Alkaline Trio. Whether you've been screaming the lyrics to "Radio" since 1998 or you just discovered their uniquely dark sound with Blood, Hair, and Eyeballs, you've found your community. This is a space by fans, for fans—dedicated to the music and the unmatched energy of Chicago's finest punk rock legends.

alk3_1.jpg

alk3_logo.jpg

vid_introtext:

First, if you're not familiar with the band, check out their newest single, and my personal favourite from the new batch.

[vid_link:]

https://youtu.be/Zk5odqEbklI?si=CrRY_wlC3H0dL_dS

Survey:

How familiar would you say you are with the group?		I would like to continue my website
☐ 1 ☐ 2 ☐ 3 ☐ 4 ☐ 5
Where did you hear from us?
*If you said other, please share
I consent to these	I had fun while browsing
☒	☒	I am satisfied with this survey
☒	☒	☒ CheckBox
Reset		Send

„How familiar would you say you are with the group?“

„Where did you hear from us?“

„Family/Friends“

„Social Media“

„Other“

„*If you said other, please share“

„I consent to these answers being given to the sole creator of this site who promises not to tell anyone”

„I had fun while browsing the site and parttaking in the survey”

„I would like to continue my website building journey, so if you have any notes for me, I encourage you to write it down”

„I am satisfied with this survey”

Members:

matt__text:

As the founding guitarist and one of the two distinct voices of the band, Matt is the architect behind Alkaline Trio's signature dark imagery. His sharp, biting guitar riffs and fascination with the morbid give the band its unmistakable, spooky edge. His time with blink-182 is also worth mentioning. While his albums there are less beloved than the blink classics by the bands fans, his time there helped to keep the band together.

dan__text:

Dan joined shortly after the band formed and quickly became the essential counterweight to Matt's darkness. If Matt is the brewing storm, Dan is the warm, albeit melancholic, rain that follows. His basslines are incredibly melodic, acting almost like a second guitar, while his vocals bring a deeply personal, heart-on-the-sleeve vulnerability to the mix.

atom__text:

The newest driving force behind the kit, Atom Willard joined the Trio just in time to shape the sound of their 2024 album, Blood, Hair, and Eyeballs. Bringing a massive resume of punk rock royalty, Atom is like a shot of pure adrenaline straight into the band's pulse.

Though sadly, just weeks before i wrote this text, he announced that he is leaving the band on Instagram. A drummers addition is crucial to the band, and as of right now, we don't know who the next candidate is.

derek__text:

Speaking of a drummers contribution, comprehensive fanpage must honor Derek Grant. For over two decades, Derek was the rhythmic backbone of Alkaline Trio. Watching Derek play was like watching a master clockmaker at work, every beat was meticulously placed and highly technical, yet delivered with the raw power needed to drive a punk rock show. Though he stepped away from the band in 2023 to focus on his health and other passions, his incredible drum arrangements on their most iconic albums remain a cornerstone of the band's legacy.

matt__pic:

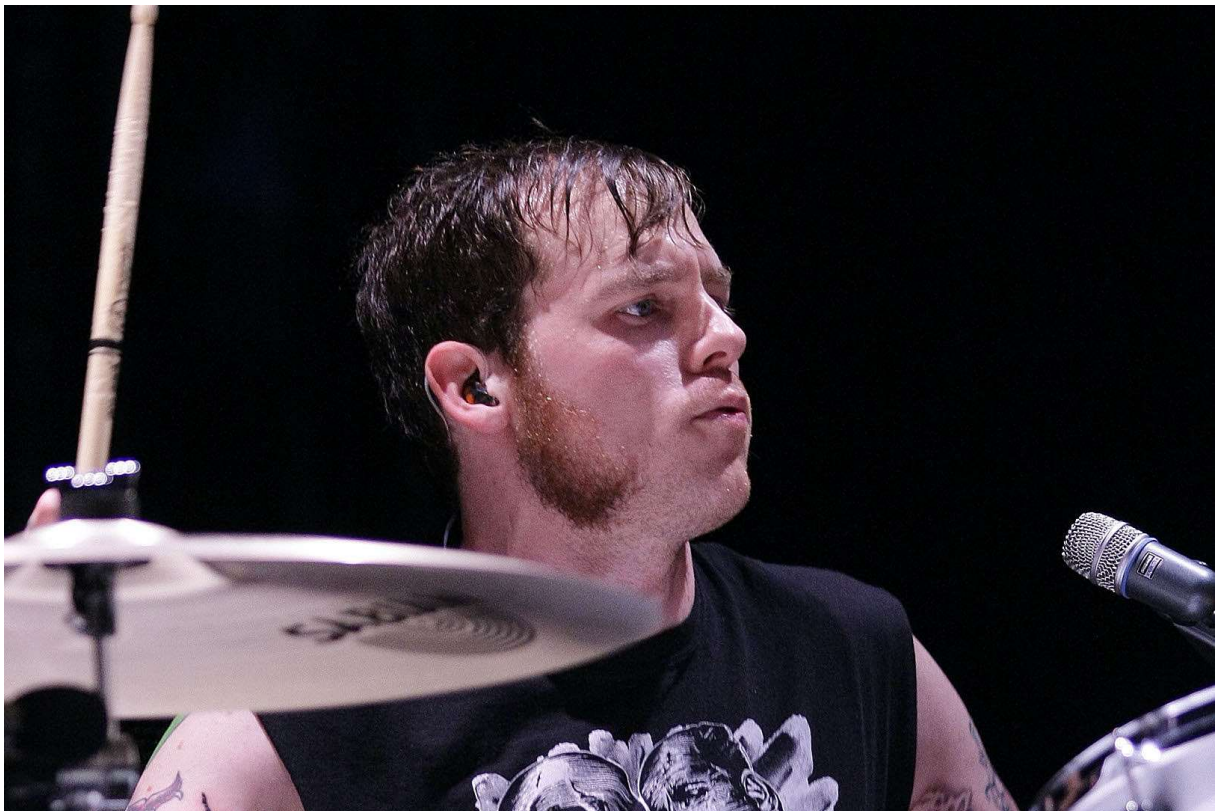

dan_pic:

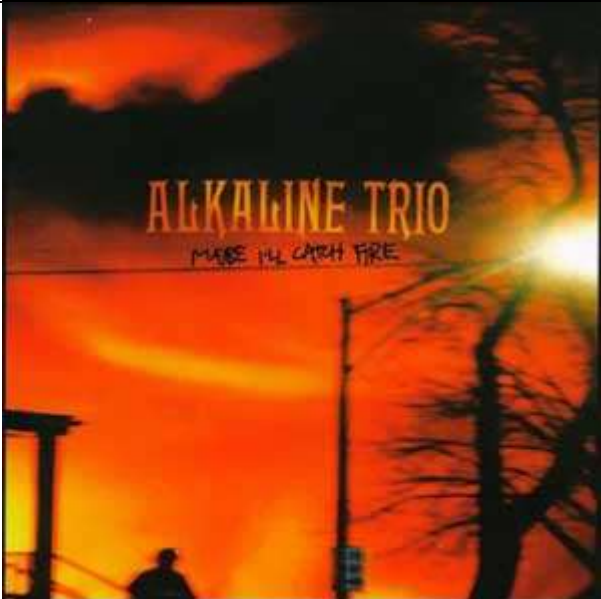

atom_pic:

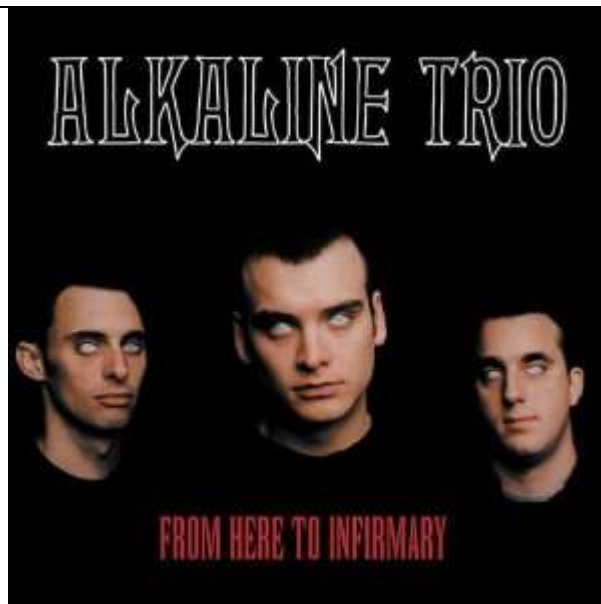

derek_pic:

Discography:

 The album cover for 'Goddamn It' by Alkaline Trio. At the top, the band's name 'ALKALINE TRIO' is written in a white, stylized, gothic-like font against a black background. Below the name is a horizontal strip containing three identical red alarm clocks with black faces and bells. At the bottom, the word 'goddamn it' is written in a large, grey, lowercase, gothic-like font against a black background.	Goddamn It (1998) Listening to their debut album is like reading a torn, whiskey-soaked diary. It is raw, youthful, and brutally honest. This record set the foundation for their signature sound, delivering unpolished, energetic punk anthems about heartbreak and life in Chicago. Personal favourite song: „Cop”
 The album cover for 'Maybe I'll Catch Fire' by Alkaline Trio. The background is a fiery orange and red scene, possibly a fire at night. In the foreground, there are dark silhouettes of trees and a street lamp. The band's name 'ALKALINE TRIO' is written in a yellow, stylized font in the upper middle, and the album title 'MAYBE I'LL CATCH FIRE' is written in a smaller, yellow, stylized font below it.	Maybe I'll Catch Fire (2000) If Goddamn It was a raging bonfire, this sophomore album is the glowing, melancholic embers left behind. It is slightly darker, more brooding, and firmly cemented the brilliant songwriting dynamic between Matt and Dan. Personal favourite (and probably most well known by fans) song: „Radio”

From Here to Infirmary (2001) This record is like a sleek, black muscle car hitting the highway at midnight. It brought a faster, more streamlined, and undeniably catchy energy that catapulted them into the mainstream punk scene, fueled by massive hits like "Stupid Kid" and "Private Eye." Personal favourite song: „Steamer Trunk”

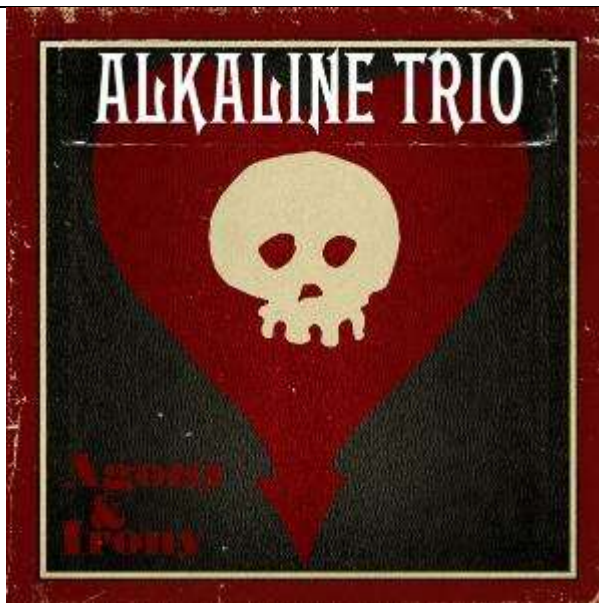

Good Mourning (2003) Imagine waking up in a gothic cathedral with a broken heart—that is the exact vibe of Good Mourning. Highly atmospheric and deeply emotional, this album introduced a thicker, slightly more polished sound, backed by Derek Grant's incredible, driving drum work. Personal favourite song: „This Could Be Love”

Grimson (2005) One of my personal favourites, Grimson operates like a beautifully staged, tragic theater play. It is grandiose, theatrical, and incorporates pianos, strings, and electronic elements, showing the band wasn't afraid to step away from traditional three-chord punk to create something truly epic. Personal favourite song: „Dethbed”

Remains (2007) Listening to Remains is like uncovering a hidden treasure chest buried in the cemetery—it is overflowing with rare, glittering gems that you can't believe were ever left off the main map. Far from a simple collection of throwaway tracks, this essential compilation gathers the absolute best B-sides, rarities, and split-EP tracks from their Vagrant Records era. Some of my favourite songs from them are in this album including: „Metro” Personal favourite song: „Queen Of Pain”

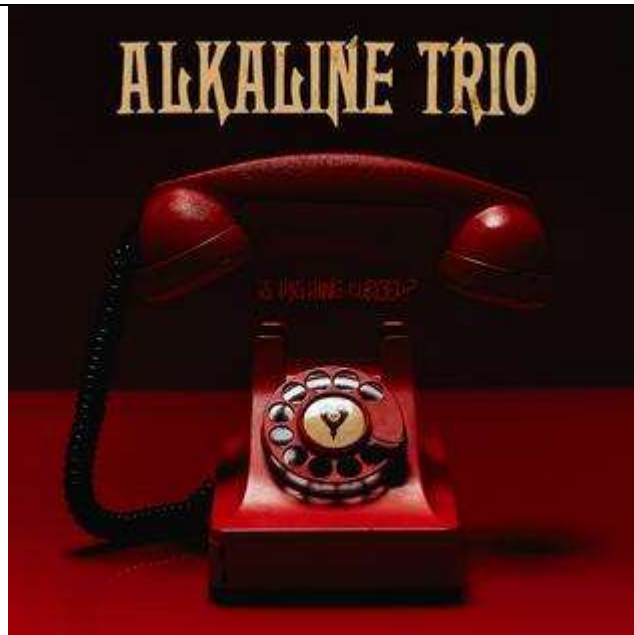

Agony & Irony (2008) This album is like a polished silver dagger—sharp, gleaming, and built for a massive audience. Released on a major label, it combined their macabre lyrical themes with huge, stadium-ready rock hooks and soaring, radio-friendly choruses. Personal favourite song: „Over And Out”

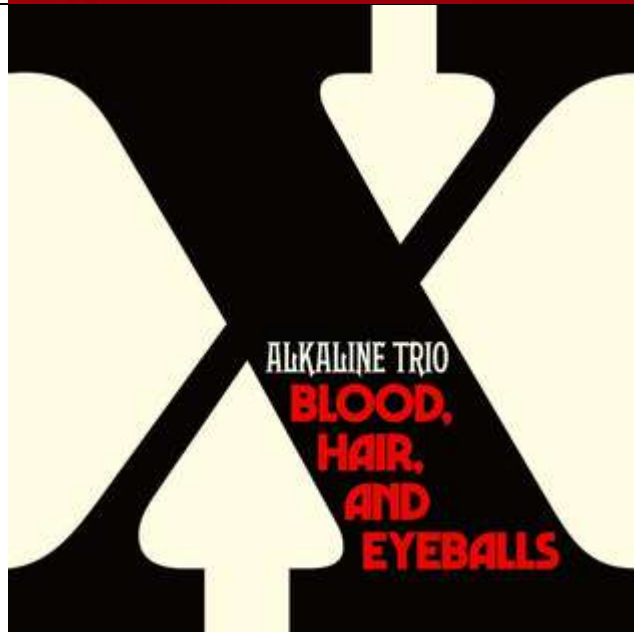

This Addiction (2010) Putting this record on is like reconnecting with a rebellious old friend from high school. The band intentionally stripped back the massive production of their previous two records to recapture the raw, fast-paced garage-punk feel of their earliest days. Personal favourite song: „This Addiction”

My Shame Is True (2013) This album feels like an open wound dressed in a beautiful, melodic bandage. It is arguably one of their most emotionally direct and vulnerable records, dealing heavily with personal regrets and the painful reality of broken relationships. Interesting fact about it: Matt in an interview said, he wrote all of the songs on it about one past love of his. Personal favourite song: „Balanced On A Shelf”

Is This Thing Cursed? (2018) This release is like a triumphant return to a familiar haunted house. After a long break, the trio came back swinging with an album that perfectly balances their classic, spooky punk energy with mature, seasoned, and incredibly sharp songwriting. Personal favourite song: „Is This Thing Cursed?”

Blood, Hair, and Eyeballs (2024) Listening to their tenth studio album is like standing at the edge of the apocalypse with a boombox playing your favorite songs. It is energetic, urgent, and proves that even after more than 25 years, the band still has immense creative firepower. Personal favourite song: „Versions Of You”